

Gloucestershire Airport Pledges Charity Support for 2011

Gloucestershire Airport has announced that it will be helping multiple charities throughout 2011. The charities to be included this year are the Jet Age Museum, who are fundraising to bring back Gloucestershire's rich aviation heritage to the Airport, Great Western Air Ambulance and Midlands Air Ambulance, who both operate within the county and frequently visit the Airport for crew training, maintenance and refuelling, and Help4Heroes, to continue their support from 2010.

Amongst the Airport's planned charity events this year will be an Open Day on Sunday July 3rd. Last year's Airport Open Day was very successful, and this year they are aiming high to make it bigger and better.

Gloucestershire Airport's Business Development Manager, Kim Davenport, said 'We are very pleased to announce the charities that we are supporting this year. Following the success of our charity events last year for Help4Heroes, where over £10 000 was raised, we would like to build on that achievement with these other community focused charities.'
